NHS
Greater Glasgow
and Clyde

In the NHS in Scotland, we try to give you the best possible care and treatment. We value comments, good or bad, to help us improve the service. If you are not happy about anything, please let us know.

This leaflet explains how to complain using the NHS complaints procedure.

What can I complain about?

Things you can complain about include:

- care or treatment you have had or are having in the NHS
- anything to do with the place where you are seen, for example a doctor's surgery, a hospital or an ambulance
- any member of NHS staff involved in your care
- how our services in your local area are organised, if this has affected your care or treatment.

If your complaint also involves another part of the NHS or another organisation, such as social services, we may need to pass it to someone there. We will tell you who is dealing with your complaint.

What can't I complain about?

There are some things you can't complain about through the NHS complaints procedure. These include:

- private health care or treatment
- services not provided or funded by the NHS, and
- something you are taking legal action about.

The NHS complaints procedure doesn't usually provide financial compensation. For advice about financial compensation, you should contact your local citizens advice bureau or a solicitor.

Who can complain?

You can complain if you have:

- had or are having NHS care or treatment, or
- visited or used our services or facilities.

You can complain for someone else if you:

- have their agreement to complain – the patient would also need to agree that staff could look at their health records if necessary
- are a child's parent, guardian or main carer and your child is not mature enough to understand how to make a complaint

- have a welfare power of attorney or a welfare guardianship order for someone who cannot make decisions for themselves, and the order specifies that you have the power to make a complaint about health care
- are a relative of, or had a relationship with, a patient who has died and you were concerned about how they were treated before they died, or
- are acting as an advocate for the patient (see page 7 for more about advocacy).

How long do I have to make a complaint?

We have a time limit for complaints. Normally, you must make your complaint:

- within six months of the event you want to complain about, or
- within six months of you finding out that you have a reason to complain – but no longer than 12 months after the event.

However, if you feel the time limit should not apply to your complaint, please speak to the person dealing with the complaint. Sometimes we can accept a complaint after the time limit.

You can complain to the Scottish Public Services Ombudsman about a decision by the NHS not to accept your complaint (see page 9 for more information).

How to complain

What should I do?

- If you can, first talk to a member of staff involved in your care. If you do this, we can try to sort out your complaint on the spot.
- If you are not able to talk to the NHS staff involved in your care, you can ask to speak to a senior member of staff or the complaints officer for the NHS organisation involved.
- You can complain in person, by phone, or in writing. When complaining, you should give:
 - your full name and address (and the patient's name and address if you are complaining for them), and
 - as much helpful information as possible about what happened, where it happened and when.
- You can also make your complaint by fax, email or textphone (if available), but if you do this other people may be able to see your personal information.

Who should I complain to?

- You should first complain directly to the person or organisation providing the service.
- If you do not feel able to do this, contact your local

NHS board to find out who can help you with your complaint – see pages 11 to 14 of the leaflet.

- If your complaint is about NHS 24 or the Golden Jubilee National Hospital, you should first speak to the person who was dealing with you. If you do not feel able to do this, speak to the complaints officer at the organisation. The contact details are on page 15.
- If your complaint is about the Scottish Ambulance Service, you should complain to their headquarters. The contact details are on pages 14.
- If your complaint is about the State Hospital, you should complain to the complaints officer there. The contact details are on page 15.

What happens after I have complained?

- We will write to you within three working days of getting your complaint.
- This letter should:
 - tell you what action we will take to look into your complaint
 - offer you the chance to talk to a member of staff about the complaint
 - give you information about independent advice and support (see page 7 for more information), and
 - give you information about conciliation if this may be helpful (see page 8 for more information).

- We will keep information about you confidential. To investigate your complaint, we may have to talk to other NHS staff about you or show them your health records. If you don't want us to share information from your health records, you should tell us when you make your complaint, but bear in mind that this may make it more difficult to look into your complaint.
- We will make a record of your details and complaint, and use it to help us make services better.

When will I get a full response?

- We will write to you with a full response within 20 working days of receiving your complaint.
- If your complaint is about a GP surgery, an NHS dental surgery, an NHS optician's practice, or a pharmacy, we will respond within 10 working days.
- In some cases, we may need more time to give you a full response and won't be able to keep to these timescales. If this happens, we will let you know and tell you why.
- In our response we will let you know the result of our investigation. We will:
 - show that we have looked into your complaint and reply to all the points raised in it
 - offer you an apology where things have gone wrong

- explain what we will do to stop what you complained about happening again
- if necessary, explain why nothing more can be done about some parts of your complaint
- offer you the chance to talk to a member of staff if there is anything in the letter you don't understand, and
- include information about the Scottish Public Services Ombudsman in case you are unhappy with our response and want to take things further (see page 9 for more information).

Who can help me with my complaint?

Independent advice and support

- If you would like to speak to someone for advice or help with making a complaint you can contact your local citizens advice bureau. See page 10 for contact details.

Advocacy

- If you find it difficult to make a complaint yourself and want someone to speak for you, you can ask for an independent advocate. An independent advocate is someone from outside the NHS who can speak for you or help you express your views. Your local NHS board or complaints officer will be able to tell you about advocacy services in your area.

Conciliation

- Conciliation means bringing people together to try to resolve a problem.
- An independent conciliator can try to help you and the person you have complained about agree what should happen next.
- Conciliation can only be used if you and the person you've complained about both agree to it.
- To find out more about conciliation, please ask the person who is dealing with your complaint.

What if I change my mind after I've complained?

- You can change your mind about making a complaint at any time. Please let us know as soon as possible. It would be helpful if you could write and tell us, but otherwise a phone call will do.

What if I'm not happy about the way the NHS has handled my complaint?

The Scottish Public Services Ombudsman (SPSO)

- If the NHS has fully investigated your complaint and you are still not happy, you can ask the SPSO to consider your complaint further.
 - The SPSO cannot normally look at complaints more than 12 months after you became aware of the matter you want to complain about. Sometimes this time limit will not apply. Please contact the SPSO for more information.
 - The SPSO cannot look at matters that have been or are being considered in court.
- If you are not happy with the way the NHS is dealing with your complaint, for example if you think it is taking too long, you can contact the SPSO.
- The Ombudsman does not take up all cases and will decide whether or not to investigate your complaint further.
- See page 16 to find out how to contact the Ombudsman.
